A Saturday visit to League Park could combine holiday shopping with crafts, food and a tree-lighting ceremony. League City's event listing schedules its Shop Small Saturday Market for Nov. 28, 2026, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at 512 Second Street. The market and tree-lighting ceremony are listed as free to attend.

The posted program offers several reasons to plan a visit at a particular time. Ballet lessons are scheduled from 9 a.m. to noon, and the city says they require a fee and advance registration. Children's crafts and activities and food trucks are also listed. The page says a free commemorative ornament will be available, with hot cocoa offered from 5 to 6 p.m. The tree-lighting ceremony is scheduled for 6 p.m.

For shoppers, the event is an opportunity to browse a market the city describes as a Shop Small Saturday event. But the listing does not name participating vendors or describe their products, so visitors should not count on finding a particular business or item. Vendor registration for 2026 is listed as full; the page does not say whether that means every vendor detail is final.

A simple plan is to decide whether the market, children's activities or evening ceremony is the main draw, then check the city's event page before leaving. The listed hours span the day, but some activities have their own times, and the ballet lessons have separate registration and fee requirements. Anyone hoping to attend those lessons should review the city's instructions rather than assume space is available.

The event is still upcoming as of Nov. 3. Its posted schedule is a preview, not a report from the park, and plans could change. The city currently lists the market and tree lighting as free, while the ballet lessons require payment and advance registration.
